Looking Back

The Crisis Alpha Intraday Program had a net return of 1.13% in October. It was a very news driven market with heightened volatility due to a myriad of concerns, with the US elections being the primary driver.

COMPOSITE RETURN TABLE (net of all fees and commissions):

Looking Forward

With potential election result controversy, stimulus uncertainty, Covid cases increasing, vaccine and medication speculation, and whatever else 2020 still has in store for us, it does seem that volatility will continue for a while. If it does then trading in this Program will be active. On the other hand, with the elections mostly over (still counting....) and the unprecedented central bank liquidity being pumped in, the market could quiet down and slowly grind sideways to up into year-end.

*Crisis Alpha Intraday is open for new accounts. The risk of loss in managed futures accounts can be substantial. You should therefore carefully consider whether such trading is suitable in light of your financial condition. In considering whether to trade or to authorize someone else to trade for you, you should also be aware of the following: leverage may be used. This can work against you as well as for you. The use of leverage can lead to large losses as well as gains. Managed futures accounts may be subject to substantial charges for management and advisory fees and the account may need to make substantial trading profits to avoid depleting or exhausting its assets. This CTA is prohibited by law from accepting funds in the trading advisor's name from a client for trading. You must place all funds for trading in this trading program directly with a Futures Commission Merchant (FCM). You may sustain a total loss of funds and any additional funds that you deposit with your broker to maintain a position in the futures market. Actual past performance is no guarantee of future results.
